

We celebrate Women's Month for the following reasons:

To celebrate the incredible success and achievements of strong women all over the globe.

To honor and pay tribute to the females who dedicated their lives in ensuring that women were granted equal rights to men.

To remember and acknowledge the discrimination and inequality of women in the past, as well as how much of it still remains in many cultures today.

To show our support for the movements dedicated to female empowerment.

To educate the masses not only about female-related struggles, but about diseases and other afflictions such as covid19 and female cancers that affect women both young and old.

To express our love and appreciation to the women who make a difference in our own lives as a wife, a mom, a sister, or as an office-colleague.
